

National Dietary Intake Survey 2022 – NDIS 2022

Data collection for the National Dietary Intake Survey (NDIS 2022) commenced during the first week of March 2022. Data will be collected across 446 enumerator areas across the nine provinces in South Africa. The sample will include in excess of 4000 each of adults, school-aged children, and children in Early Childhood Development (ECD) programmes, as well as smaller numbers of elderly and young children in the sampled adult households. This is a huge undertaking and important project involving more than 120 people, including principal investigators, academic collaborators, coordinators, team leaders and fieldworkers, inclusive of NSSA members, in the data collection.

The NSSA wishes everyone involved in this project the best of luck.
